The year 2010 was exciting in many ways. With inspiring exhibitions, educational programs and events, Telfair Museums saw record-breaking attendance with a total of 179,993 visitors, the highest attendance ever. We continued to offer a wide array of programming and exhibitions while staying focused on our mission—to develop awareness and appreciation for the arts and serve as a dynamic cultural center connecting people of all ages and backgrounds.

A highlight in exhibitions this year was the continuation of Dutch Utopia, our most significant exhibition to date. The show closed in January and our staff immediately prepared the artwork to start its international traveling tour. Having this exhibition travel not only increased the visibility of Telfair Museums but enhanced the reputation of our institution throughout the national and international art communities.

We began our ambitious exhibition schedule with the opening of Counterillumination (C-2010), an installation by Shih Chieh Huang in conjunction with PULSE; Painter’s Reel: Contemporary Painting in Georgia, a show highlighting the energy and connections shared among contemporary painters from Georgia, featuring local artists Betsy Cain and Marcus Kenney; and Aldwyth: Collage and Assemblage, 1991-2009, a retrospective of collage and assemblage, at the Jepson Center. We also showcased Soldier Portraits: Contemporary Wet Plate Collodion Photographs by Ellen Susan—a show of compelling portraits of active-duty members of the US Army; Twilight Visions: Surrealism, Photography and Paris, including photography, film, books and period ephemera that display the experience of Surrealist writers and artists as they wandered through the streets of Paris; and No Ordinary Folk: Southern Self-Taught Artists from the Permanent Collection—a collection of work by self-taught artists, largely from the South. Local artist Matt Hebermehl created a special installation consisting of five suspended wooden birds for the Jepson’s Eckburg Atrium. The ever-popular collection of drawings, watercolors and paintings by Lebanese-born artist and writer Kahlil Gibran made its debut in the Varnedoe and Levitt Galleries in the fall.

Telfair Academy exhibitions included The Story of Silver in Savannah: Creating and Collecting Since the 18th Century, highlighting the important role Savannah played in the production and collection of silver in Georgia’s largest coastal city; The South Beheld: Southern Works from the Telfair’s Permanent Collection, a show selection of works by southern artists; and Metalpoint Drawings by Dennis Martin, which celebrated the museum’s acquisition of Girl Laying, a major goldpoint drawing donated by the artist’s widow.

As the holidays approached we prepared a show from the Smithsonian American Art Museum, Modern Masters. In order to create additional awareness and visitation during this time, our marketing committee, in conjunction with Savannah Downtown Renewal Authority and VisitSavannah, developed the museum’s very first social media voting campaign. You may have noticed many of the businesses on Broughton Street had the similar holiday theme of Modern Holiday. Pedestrians were invited to text their votes for their favorite Modern Holiday window display to a designated number. At the close of the campaign, which ran for 2 weeks, we had received more than 700 responses. The votes were tallied and the winner received an ad in the Savannah Morning News Sunday paper. This not only raised awareness for the museum and the exhibition, but it also allowed us to communicate directly with a tech-savvy audience.

The year ended on a high note with our annual exhibition, I Have Marks to Make. This program is in its sixteenth year and highlights the role art can play in the lives of individuals with disabilities and for those in rehabilitation from injury or illness. We were reminded that the act of making art can benefit us all as individuals by this inspiring show.

One of the most anticipated and award-winning events of the year is our arts and technology festival, PULSE. Through the sponsorship of the City of Savannah and community partners, we are able to offer 11 days of non-stop programs including workshops, lectures and performances free of charge. Nearly half of the attendees are youth and young adults who have the opportunity to interact with artists who are working with cutting-edge technology right in their own community. Now in its fourth year, it has quickly become one of the most anticipated programs at the Telfair.

Our education department continues to make great strides in making the three sites of the museum accessible to all audiences through outreach programs, special exhibition tours, lectures, films, gallery talks and free family days. Serving over 8,000 individuals through a wide range of offerings, both on- and off-site, students receive a well-rounded experience by spending time in the galleries and in the studios. The year’s most popular lectures included Smithsonian curator Virginia Mecklenburg’s lecture for the opening of Modern Masters and Tania Sammons’ lecture for the opening of The Story of Silver in Savannah. Specialized training in visual thinking strategies and curriculum guides are also offered to educators and docents on an annual basis so that this teaching methodology can be brought into the classroom.

The museum continued to work in collaboration with a variety of local educational and cultural organizations to present programs that accommodate many interests and allow visitors to experience the museum as a community gathering space. On the national level, we participated in Blue Star Museums, a program offering free admission for all active military personnel and their families, and International Museum Day, a day to raise awareness of the importance museums hold in our society.

Our successes prove that even in uncertain times with a questionable economy, the Telfair is committed to delivering the highest quality programming in all we do. As we go into our 125th anniversary year, the community of museum supporters can take pride in knowing that the future is bright and the opportunities for advancement are abundant. Thanks to the continued community and member support—we could not have come this far without you.
